SEEKING EMPLOYMENT

You are entitled to look for a job, even if this will mean that the job search will impair your ability to perform your Government duties because you will be subject to disqualification requirements (as explained below).

DISQUALIFICATION REQUIREMENTS RELATING TO A JOB SEARCH

During the period of an employment search which will begin when you

- first contact (by any means of communication, including submission of a resume) the prospective employer (including anyone for whom you are seeking to provide personal services, including as an agent, attorney, consultant, contractor, director, general partner, officer, or trustee, as well as employee), or
- are first contacted by the prospective employer, or
- you learn from a headhunter or agent that a firm has been contacted on your behalf and will continue until
- you notify the prospective employer of no further interest,
- the prospective employer notifies you of no further interest, or
- two months have elapsed since you (or your agent) sent a prospective employer an unsolicited résumé or other submission regarding a job, you cannot:

work as a Federal employee on any matter affecting a prospective employer's financial interests, either individually or as a member of an industry sector or other group, during the period of the job search.

NOTIFICATION REQUIREMENTS

If you are engaged in an employment search, you must give notice of disqualifications due to the employment search if:

- you are a member of the SES, a political appointee, or otherwise in a position that requires you to file a public financial disclosure report (OGE Form 278), in which case you must give a signed notice to an ethics official within 3 days of beginning employment negotiations, with a disqualification statement (a Notice of Employment Negotiations, available at www.commerce.gov/ethics, can be used for this purpose);
- you are accepting travel payments from a prospective employer, in which case the notification should be in writing to either your supervisor or an ethics official;
- you are participating in a procurement of greater than $100,000 in value and you contact, or are contacted by, competing contractors in the procurement, in which case you must provide written notification to both your supervisor and an ethics official, even if you do not pursue discussions after the initial contact; or

This restriction is most likely to affect you if after leaving the Government you join a partnership with a Federal practice that distributes income based in part on partnership earnings. If you receive payments from such a firm that are based on earnings during the period you were in Government service, you must ensure that any distribution you receive does not include payments based on representational services the firm provided in matters before the U.S. Government during the period in which you worked for the Government. Usually, this means that the first distribution you receive may require some reduction if the firm has a Federal practice.

Note that this restriction on payments for the representational activities of others also applies while you are employed by the Government. However, if you serve for less than 130 days in a 365-day period, the restriction is much narrower. This restriction applies if you served as the procuring contracting officer, source selection authority, a member of the source evaluation board, or as the chief of a financial or technical evaluation team on a procurement when a selection was made; or as a program manager, deputy program manager, or administrative contracting officer for a contract; or personally made a decision regarding the award or modification of a contract, subcontract, task order, or delivery order; or made a substantive decision regarding a contract valued at $10,000,000 or more, such as regarding settlement of a claim or establishment of overhead rates.

from seeking or accepting employment with a Federal agency (or other entity in the Executive Branch) that you lobbied

Exception – This restriction does not apply if your activities are covered by a waiver issued by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget (or designee), in consultation with the Counsel to the President (or designee) based on a determination that application of the restriction is inconsistent with the purposes of the restriction or that it is in the public interest to grant the waiver.

- being retained to provide professional services to, or
- receiving an employment offer from a firm to which EDA provided assistance if you occupied a position or engaged in activities that involved discretion with respect to the financial assistance on the date the assistance was provided or within one year prior to the date the assistance was provided.

This restriction is actually a limitation on the financial assistance recipient, who agrees for two years after assistance is provided not to hire, retain, or offer employment to an EDA employee who worked on the financial assistance application when the assistance was provided or within a one-year period prior to the date the assistance was provided.
